

Movements of Freya in 2011

02 January 2011

Freya remains in the Strathdon area; she was on the farmlands near Strathdon at 2pm on 23rd and then later at dusk in the usual roosting woods. On 24th December, she was on moorlands just to the SW at 2pm and back in Forestry Commission woodlands at 6pm. On Christmas day, she had flown north over the Ladder Hills and at 10am and 2pm she was over farmland near Chapeltown in Glenlivet. Finally at 6.30pm on 29th, a non GPS location was in the usual forests in Strathdon.

05 January 2011: No change

Freya was on the low ground around Strathdon village in the early afternoon.

11 January 2011: Same area

Freya was near Carn Mor in the Ladder Hills at 1.23pm on 10th.

19 January 2011: No change

Freya was roosting in one of her usual sites in the Forestry Commission woodlands north of Strathdon at 2.06am on 18th January.

22 January 2011: No change

Freya continued to use the Strathdon area, heading out into the Ladder Hills during the day – near Cockbridge 2pm on 17th, near Lecht 2pm on 18th, north of Carn Mor on 19th at 2pm, at 2pm on 21st and 22nd between Lecht and Carn Mor.

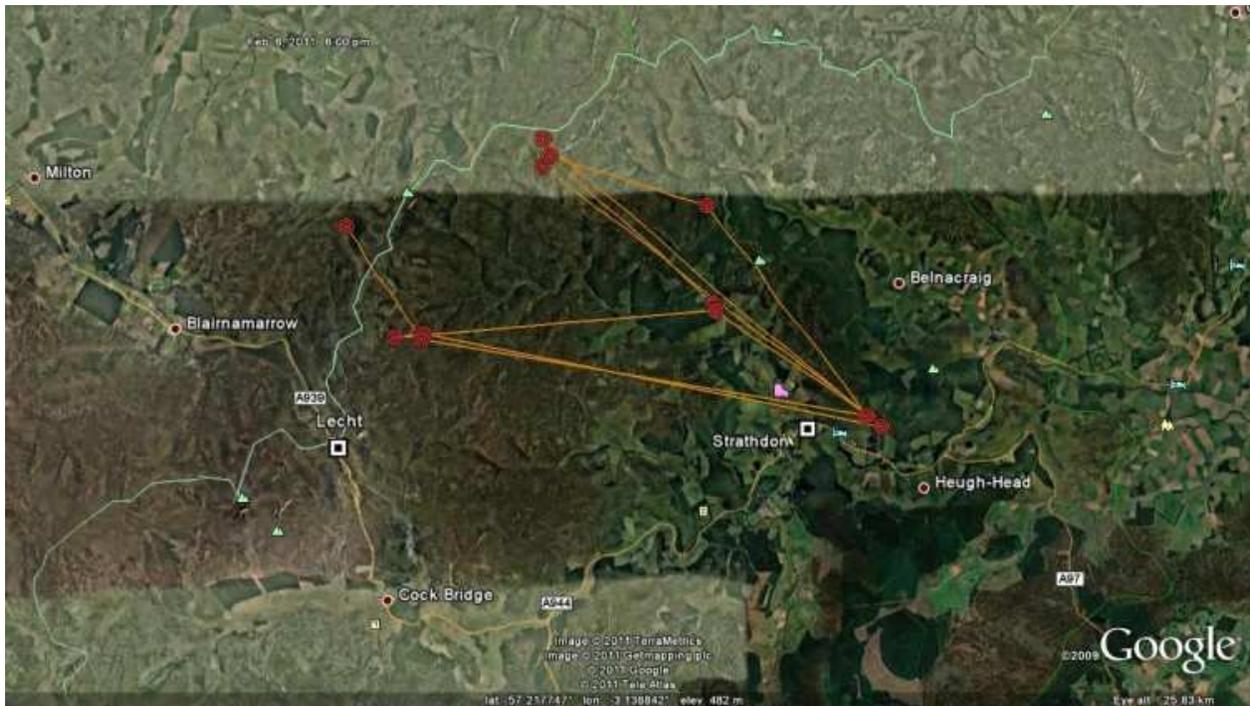

27 January 2011: No change

Still using the Strathdon forests and travelling up onto Ladder Hills during the day.

08 February 2011: No change

Very good series of GPS data showed Freya carrying out usual routine of roosting in forests and flying out onto open ground during the day, over a range of 40 square km.

13 February 2011: No change

Freya in same area, ranging during the day to the south of Strathdon on 7th, to the east of the Lecht on 9th and on Glen Livet estate on 10th and 11th.

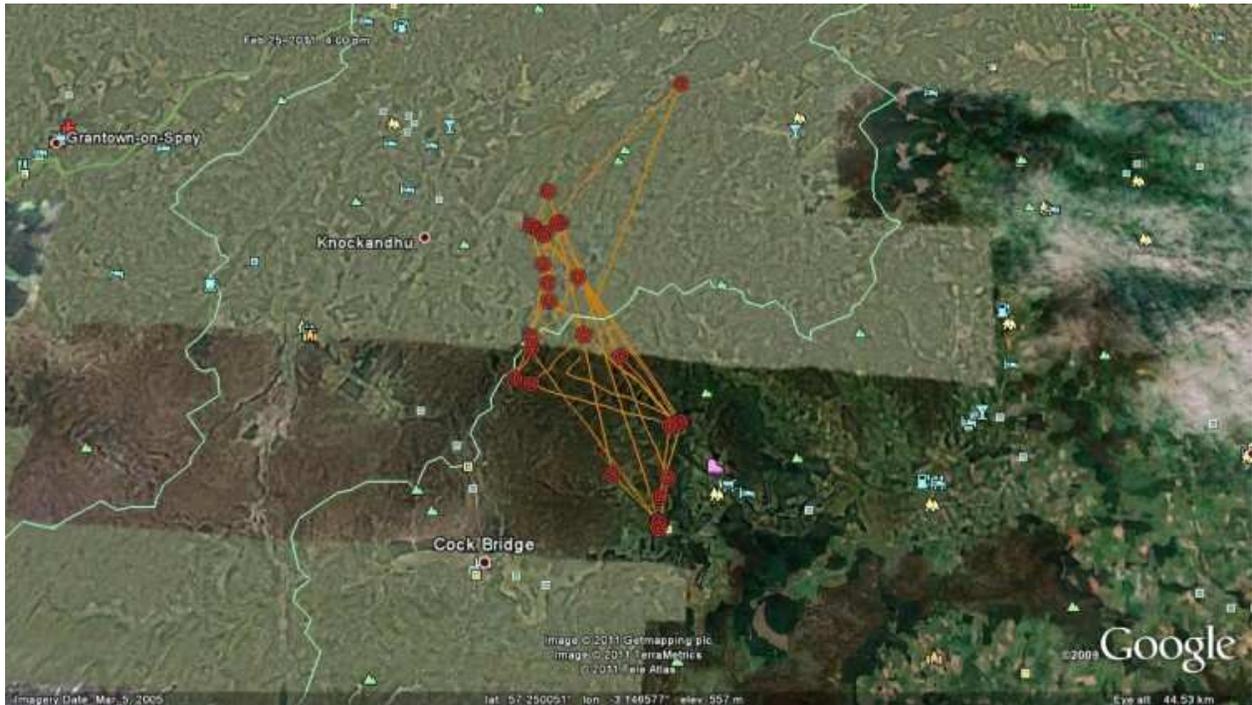

19 February 2011: Moving about more

Freya has spent more time on Glenlivet side of the Ladder Hills and even roosted overnight in a plantation near Chapelton on 10th/11th February. On the 18th at 2pm was at the south end of Glen Fiddich before returning to Strathdon.

25 February 2011

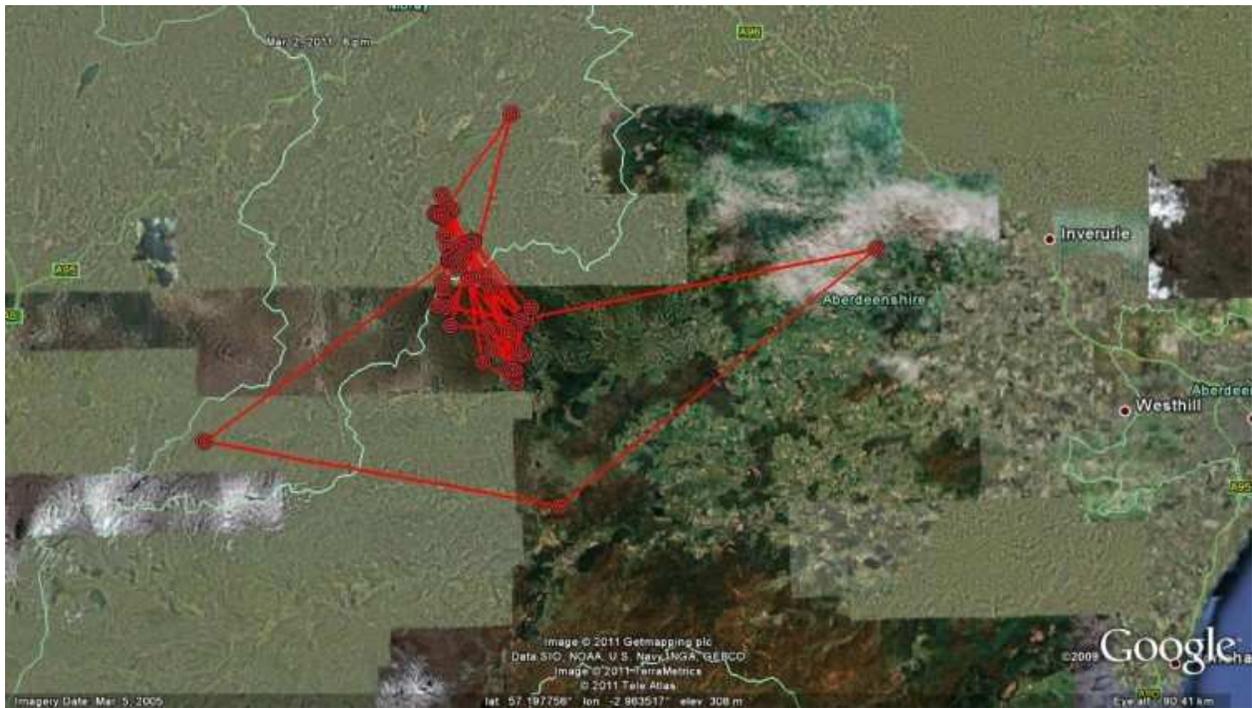

Vega has changed her routine but still living in same area. Her night roosts are scattered with new ones further south in Strathdon near Inverernan, while day time flights have ranged much further – on four days 22nd – 25th she was in the Suie area of Glenfiddich during the midday period, while on 22nd at 2pm she had flown all the way to near Glenfiddich Lodge. The longest distance across locations was 22 km and her range was 104 square km.

03 March 2011: Big flight on 1st March

Freya continues to live in the same area in Strathdon and Glenlivet, but on 1st March (in beautiful spring-like weather) she went on a big flight. She left Strathdon after 8am and at 10am was 30 km east, some 13 km west of Inverurie, near Glenton. Two hours later she had flown some 34 km SW over Alford to Lary near Gairnshiel and then flew 30 km WNW along the north side of the mountains towards the Upper Ailnack river by 2pm, she then flew 25 km back to her normal haunts in Glen Livet. A day's flight of at least 120 km – I wonder if she saw any peregrines on the way and how many.

09 March 2011: No news

Should have been signals today but nothing came in from Freya's transmitter. On 5th March she was in Strathdon, and after her last GPS reading at 6am, her battery was drained by 8am, so maybe needs some sun to recharge.

13 March 2011: May be something wrong

No transmissions since the 5th March, so two signal days have been missed. It's looking very possible that something has happened to Freya – I hope that we may get something next scheduled date but it could be that she has been killed on her travels.

20 March 2011: Almost certainly lost

No signals from Freya's transmitter so it's looking as though she is lost. Her transmitter has charged through the winter and so it's more likely that she moved into new areas, where she was killed, rather than a transmitter fault.
